Call to Action The United Aromatherapy Effort

When you talk with Sylla Sheppard Hanger it is like visiting with your best friend. She is so humble about her talents, work ethic, and compassion that you forget you are talking to an Aromatherapy icon. Initially, I wanted to interview Sylla to discuss the creation and operation of The United Aromatherapy Effort but after chatting with her for awhile; I decided that this was also my opportunity to highlight her passionate and selfless commitment to share her talents with the world.

What prompted you to create the UAE?

Sylla created The United Aromatherapy Effort with her friend (LMBT) Doug E. Rasmussen (affectionately known as "Doug E.") Executive Director of the Emergency Response Massage International (ERMI) and Carolina Response Massage Team (CERMT) in 2001 after the September 11th attacks on the World Trade Center in New York City. "The purpose of UAE is to collect and disseminate donated aromatherapy products thru the emergency response massage teams ERMI and CERMT thus far. ERMI/CERMT's purpose is to provide a stress relieving 15 minute chair massages for relief workers responding to disasters and emergency efforts. It has been shown that these treatments offer the first responders a chance to become more relaxed and refreshed before their required debriefing; so post traumatic stress (PTS) is mitigated."

Sylla gives Doug E. most of the credit for providing the United Aromatherapy Effort a venue for dissemination. "Without Doug E.'s previous work, the UAE would be less effective as this is how the products get to the first responders. She says, "He is an awesome guy"! Doug is a graduate of Sylla's Atlantic Institute of Aromatherapy and he and his wife were principal tutors of her Key West branch. Sylla says, "Doug is really the one who started the ball rolling for massage therapists becoming involved in supporting rescue workers through massage therapy after the Oklahoma bombings. He helped form the first Florida team, then went on to form the Carolina team (CERMT) and now an international team ERMI that any therapist from any state or country can be a volunteer team member. Aromatherapy to enhance the relaxation experience for these heroes has always been a part of the one-day training for volunteers who learn the massage routine, aromatherapy intro. and some emergency management/incident management protocol."

Sylla says the idea to add donations to Doug E.'s work was one of those "creative insights" she sometimes gets during massage with clients. After the massage, she immediately told Doug E. she was joining the CERMT team, and that they were going to have aromatherapy to give out! She put the word out thru the internet aromatherapy network. Without Kelli and NAHA's help the UAE effort would not have been as effective since they are primarily responsible for getting the initial word out for both 9/11 and the Gulf Coast. The initial website, United Aromatherapy.org was an early contribution which also helped get the word out. Afterwards, another client donated time to maintain it. The site allows for updates, pictures, and 'wish list' of monetary and aromatherapy product donations. The products poured in from people who knew they would take it where it was needed.

Sylla shared some impressive statistics, "the UAE/CERMT team worked four separate deployments in NY, gave out over $10,000 worth of aromatherapy and performed over 3500 massages to FDNY, NYPD, PAPD, etc. at Ground Zero, the landfill, and fire stations all over the 5 Burroughs. In addition 22 fire stations were "adopted" by the aromatherapy community and were provided with diffusers, vaporizers and oils. It was only 10% of the 'houses' in NYC but we hope we made a little difference. Now in the Gulf Coast effort ERMI has worked for 4 weeks in Mississippi and 2 weeks in Louisiana and CERMT has worked 6 weeks in MS with 60 therapists giving 2500 massages!"

Sylla is quick to tell you how much this experience meant to her personally and professionally (or as she calls it, the contribution of a lifetime). "It is truly a life changing experience to volunteer for this type of work. It is a group effort and no matter what else I do, nothing will ever mean more to me than my work during 9/11 and now the Gulf coast effort. Giving and receiving are so powerful and it is such an awesome feeling!" Reflecting on your most recent Gulf Coast trip, what aromatherapy blends did you find most useful?

"Well, I want everyone to know that we don't just set the aromatherapy donations out on a table and let people choose one. Each massage therapist or aromatherapist personally places a spray, roll-on, or inhaler in the hand of the intended user. Almost all of the responders react positively and are thrilled with the aromatherapy! They will tell you that when they come in the building, they can tell we are here because it smells so wonderful. We try to address each responder's physical or emotional condition based on their individual needs if we have time and a product they can use. We have had several memorable experiences and one neat thing in Biloxi was when we asked if they had ever had massage or aromatherapy before many answered "yes", they saw us in NY! Another incident I remember clearly was a lady who was having a terrible migraine headache. She had suffered with this headache for a couple of days and she was hoping the massage would help. I took out a peppermint/lavender spray that had been donated to us and that was exactly what this lady needed. She came back the next day totally amazed; said it helped her migraine immediately, she was able to sleep the first good night since her deployment. She was SO grateful for us! It almost brought me to tears to see this lady who had suffered for days find relief and leave the cubicle where we were working cheerful and pain free.

I also want to mention, that you (Sara) received feedback from a gentleman on the Disaster Mortuary Response Team DMORT) who had received a mosquito repellent blend that you and your Parkland College class had prepared and donated. It is so exciting to hear about someone successfully using aromatherapy as a first responder and sharing such positive feedback with you. We don't get a lot of feedback once these things go out in the field, or we go back home. You have to interview him, this could be a whole new niche for aromatherapy!"

What changes have you seen in the UAE since 2001?

"I have learned so much since then. This work is emotionally addicting. You get an endorphin rush from helping people and so you don't realize how much the devastation and emotions are affecting you. Doug is excellent about scheduling us so we don't wear out; he monitors our body mechanics while we work, helping to prevent strains. Typically we are scheduled 6 hours a day max! We can only work one week on and three weeks off. After 9-11 I actually suffered post traumatic disorder (PTSD) because I overdid it physically, emotionally, spiritually and financially. It is easy to get caught up in the emotions without even realizing it. I worked hard to move through this.

Now I am better prepared, and take care of myself physically, emotionally, and spiritually. I also fund-raised for gas money before I go, instead of going into debt myself like I did in NY, racking up thousands of credit card bills to get myself and my daughter there to volunteer!"

What direction would you like to see the United Aromatherapy Effort go from here?

"I have to tell you, we have come such a long way! After I spoke at the Aromatics in Action conference in Denver (Oct.-9, 2005) and the response to the ABMP website we had over 300 massage therapists and aromatherapists volunteer. Even though Doug trains each massage therapist to use aromatherapy in the field, I would like to see an aromatherapist assigned to each team. I would also like to have funds available so that we don't have to worry about the UAE's sustainability. We have had wonderful response to donations for supplies, but we always need cash for additional supplies, hotel rooms, meals, etc. Right now we need inhalers to get into New Orleans! We have found that inhalers are one of the easiest and most effective ways to get the benefits of aromatherapy out there where they are needed. The results of combining aromatherapy and massage in this type of work are amazing. Together the two are unbeatable! I truly believe we are breaking new ground in aromatherapy. And the way it seems, the disasters are coming faster and closer together, so its important to get therapists trained in every state so locals can take care of their communities, and perhaps the UAE can supply products from here on out."

What should someone reading this do if they would like to be involved?

"They contact me via email at Sylla@tampabay.rr.com, if they would like to donate products or make a financial contribution. If you are a massage therapist and would like to volunteer to go, realize it is not a picnic, we sleep 10 to a room on cots in fire stations, and you may be uncomfortable, but if you don't have an agenda and truly want to help email Doug at ermi@juno.com or call direct at 812-215-9195 (after Jan.12th).

Whole sections of the coast of Mississippi were crushed along with Louisiana. We just finished in Gulfport/Biloxi, Baton Rouge and finally in New Orleans working with the Police Department. We start back up in January and hope to get local therapists to take over eventually. We hope to keep supplying some aromatherapy as long as we can.

Anyone who wants to help should enlist the help of their family, friends and clients to support you to go. A client and friend bought my first ticket to New York. Everybody wants to help!"

I would like to thank Sylla for taking time out of her busy schedule to share her thoughts with me. Acting on Sylla's suggestion I also interviewed, Jim Weldy from Havana, IL of the Disaster Mortuary Response Team about his aromatherapy experience while deployed to Mississippi during Hurricane Katrina and that interview follows.
